All jokes aside, Scott. I actually prefer the IMF list of GDP per capita by country. <https://www.imf.org/external/datamapper/NGDPDPC@WEO/OEMDC/ADVEC/WEOWORLD>. Of the top twenty countries on the list 13 of them are in Europe, and with the exception of Macao the rest are former UK colonies in Asia and America. What this tells me is that the biggest corollary to a healthy per capita GDP is

How Weimerica does #Bach.
#oregonbachfest

The Goldberg Variations with a rapper may seem as desperate as your dad saying "dude," but considering who now is writing our great works, and opening up the canon to pop — and all its attendant and more diverse voices (read: less old dead white men) — may just be the answer. Bach's music is timelessly beautiful. But maybe it's time to bury Bach the Lutheran.

From the millionaires to the scared little people who attend the endless pitiful "conservative," "100% American," "old-fashioned," "constitutional," "state's rights" -- meetings -- I learned by bitter experience, that the human material of the right wing consists 90% of cowards, dopes, nuts, one-track minds, blabbermouths, boobs, incurable tight-wads and -- worst of all -- hobbyists -- people who have come to enjoy a perverted, masochistic pleasure in telling each other forever how we are all being raped by the "shhh--you-know-whos," but, who, under no conditions, would think of risking their two cars, landscaped homes, or juicy jobs to DO something about it.

#88Precepts

18. There exists no such thing as rights or privileges under the Laws of Nature. The deer being stalked by a hungry lion has no right to life. However, he may purchase life by obedience to nature-ordained instincts for vigilance and flight. Similarly, men have no rights to life, liberty or happiness. These circumstances may be purchased by oneself, by one's family, by one's tribe or by one's ancestors, but they are nonetheless purchases and not rights. Furthermore, the value of these purchases can only be maintained through vigilance and obedience to Natural Law.
